Description

The Lawyers' Committee for Civil Rights Under Law seeks the pro bono assistance of a law firm(s) with the development of a guide on best practices and policies that will help advance racial equity and access to law and medical schools in light of last summer's U.S. Supreme Court decision in the affirmative action cases. This project will consist of two phases. The first phase will consist of conducting research on barriers to admission to medical and law schools for Black and other students of color and best practices for advancing racial equity in these schools. Phase two will include taking the above research and crafting a "best practices guide" post Supreme Court decisions for recruitment and admissions programs for law and medical schools. The assistance of an engaged partner (who is actively overseeing the work and final product) and two to three associates is needed. The Lawyers' Committee is the client.
