Description

Black Land Loss Narrative Archive Project (BLLNAP) captures, preserves, and shares stories of Black land loss, to inspire public awareness, community activism, political leadership, and change.

The collected stories serve as an invaluable resource for scholars, authors, historians, educators, storytellers, policymakers, and change agents addressing reparations, racial inequity in homeownership, and the racial wealth gap. The documentation of black land loss will help demonstrate the magnitude of what Black families have lost and will contribute to national dialogue to encourage paths to restitution, rebuilding, and healing.
