Description

HIV criminalization refers to situations where people living with HIV face criminal charges for otherwise lawful conduct, or face harsher charges for illegal conduct, based on their HIV status. The SERO Project consults with criminal defense attorneys who represent people living with HIV. The SERO Project is looking for assistance in building a motion bank of motions relating to a defendant's health status that have previously been filed in other cases. This could include motions to dismiss, motions to suppress statements or medical records, motions in limine to exclude reference to health status, or motions for a new trial.
