Description

A doula advocacy group based in Nevada, the DOULA CO-OP, is seeking legal support on helping to protect the rights of doulas to do their work in hospitals. They are experiencing a handful of hospitals in the state that are implementing restrictive policies around doula entry, support, and scope of practice in the hospital. The DOULA CO-OP is trying to understand what their rights are under state law to be able to accompany their clients to appointments as well as to labor/delivery in clinics and hospitals, as well as to be able to provide their full scope of doula services. The issue is particularly critical as doulas are now a covered benefit for Medicaid enrollees in the state.
