Description

The Gault Center is developing accessible fact sheets drawing from an existing 20-state analysis of detention and transfer statutes. The analysis identifies patterns of racial disparity in how youth are processed and punished across these jurisdictions. The project will extract key findings and themes that highlight both the disparate impact of these statutes and any historical or structural roots of racial inequity embedded in the laws. The fact sheets will be designed to communicate these findings in a clear, accessible format for advocates, policymakers, and the public. Examples of other fact sheets will be provided as reference models for format and tone.
