

Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF): District of Columbia

< LFAA RESOURCES < PUBLICATIONS & RESEARCH

Publications & Research

01 Aug 2022

The Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) program provides grants to states to provide families with cash assistance and related support services. States have broad discretion to determine eligibility for their TANF cash assistance programs and can restrict who can receive cash assistance and in what amount. These policies are often rooted in racist and sexist ideas about parents — especially Black mothers with low incomes — that have influenced cash assistance programs for over a century and resulted in marked racial discrepancies with respect to who receives benefits. Two policies that have racist roots are the work requirement (which requires TANF recipients to participate in “work activities” as a condition of receiving cash benefits) and the family cap (which says that children born or conceived while a family receives cash assistance are not counted in determining benefits). Some states have done away with these policies in recent years, and the COVID-19 pandemic has led to changes in many state programs. This state specific report—which is part of a larger survey—looks at 19 states and provides an overview of each state’s stance with regard to the work requirement and family cap.

Contacts

Stephanie Turner

Paul Kiernan

Working Groups

Public Benefits

LFAA is not a law firm and does not provide legal services or referrals. The contents of this resource do not constitute legal advice and the user of this resource agrees that no attorney-client relationship is being formed between the user and any person or entity, including LFAA and the lawyers or law firms that drafted the resource. LFAA makes no representation regarding the accuracy of any information included in this resource.

Attachments

Temporary Assistance for Needy Families District of Columbia

LFAA is not a law firm and does not provide legal services or referrals to individuals, legal services organizations or public interest agencies. If you believe you need a lawyer, please contact your local bar association or go to www.lawhelp.org.

© 2026 Law Firm Antiracism Alliance. All Rights Reserved